Classical Net Re-Launched in 2008
First phase of site redesign completed

JANUARY 29, 2008 – Today Classical Net (www.classical.net), the internet's leading resource for classical music, announced that their site has been thoroughly rebuilt and re-launched with a new look. Specifically re-designed to improve the user interface, with a new, sleeker, look – the new structure enables visitors to find just what they are looking for quickly and easily thanks to a unique cross-referencing system.

With nearly 5,000 CD, DVD and book reviews and over 5,500 links to composer data, resources, biographies, articles, recommendations and CD buying guides, etc., Classical Net has won numerous awards for design as well as content. For 13 years Classical Net has been the authoritative one-stop site for the music-loving internet user.

In existence longer than any comparable site - since 1995 - the Classical Net operation draws on an international network of specialists and has long-standing affiliate and partnership relationships with such retailers as Google, Amazon, ArkivMusic, CD Universe, Musicnotes, and SheetMusicPlus.

Please take a look at the new layout, the updated and streamlined review and resource sections. Future phases of the redesign are planned to address developing technologies that enable user-generated content to be featured at the site, as well as offering downloadable music samples and streaming audio content. Contact Classical Net's founder, Dave Lampson with comments, questions and requests to become involved.

About Classical Net

Classical Net was one of the very first web sites to not only provide authoritative classical music resources, but to categorize and link together thousands of web resources spread throughout the world. Founded in 1994 by music enthusiast Dave Lampson, the Classical Net name and domain were registered in 1995 and is today one of the most visited classical music site with over 40 million visitors since launch. More than 500,000 people visit every month. Classical Net's targeted advertising program for classical music businesses and organizations of all sizes provides visibility unmatched in this select market, while enhancing the overall web experience for visitors by ensuring that only appropriate products and services are offered. Classical Net is headquartered in California, USA. For more information on advertising opportunities, please contact Mark Sealey.
